U. S. Collection of Drought Loans Is Begun In County

Farmers Cautioned About Releasing Crop to Third Person

DEALER ALSO HELD

Warehousing of Cotton to Be Permitted, Says Lynch

Notice of the intention of the federal government to collect all drought loans in full, holding both the farmer and the agent who buys from him responsible for this payment, has been received here in letters addressed to Hempstead county farmers and commission merchants.

The letter addressed to the buyers reads in part as follows:

"We are enclosing herewith for your convenience and use, lists of federal loans in your territory. . . .

"Our reports indicate that crops in your state are, generally speaking, very good, and the government must now be fully reimbursed for these loans. As security for the loans, the Secretary of Agriculture holds promissory notes and valid first mortgages over the crops to be grown this season. The mortgage guarantees that the loan will be paid from the proceeds of the first crops sold. Since these loans are preferred claims, it is essential that the purchasers of such crops remit to this office the first proceeds of sales up to the amount due the government."

Cotton May Be Stored

Both the letters to the buyers and the one to the farmers are signed by J. H. Lynch, administrative officer in charge of the Farmers' Seed Loan Office at Memphis, a federal bureau.

"Borrowers who desire to do so," continues Mr. Lynch, "may store their crops, and no objection will be interposed provided they are stored in bonded warehouses and receipts therefore forwarded to this office to be held as collateral. Warehouse receipts should be drawn to the order of the Secretary of Agriculture. If drawn to the order of the borrower he should

Bootlegging of Tobacco Declines

State Men Receive Only Few Reports of Law Violations

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(P)—Cigarette and cigar "bootleggers" in Arkansas who supply tax free "smokers" are gradually being eliminated by a steady and unrelenting drive, officials of the state revenue department say.

While not generally prevalent over the state, tobacco "bootleggers" spring up spasmodically in various sections, but they have been eradicated to such an extent that less than an estimated five per cent of the total revenue from this source is lost, revenue department officials assert.

The greatest loss, they say, is not through "bootlegging" dealers, but is caused by consumers who order cigars and cigarettes from states which do not have a tax and receive them by parcel post.

As yet, there is no way to stop this, but the revenue department is working with the federal government and the post office department in an effort to devise a plan for stopping the flow of contraband. Revenue department officials point out that possession by the consumer of unstamped cigars and cigarettes as much a violation of the law as possession by a dealer.

The work of apprehending "bootleggers" among the approximately 10,000 retail cigar and cigarette dealers in the state is as highly organized and operates efficiently as a prohibition

Airplane to Run Auto With Radio

Gloria Hall, Los Angeles Flyer, Will Make Amazing Demonstration on Race Track of Fair Grounds in Hope at 4 o'clock Sunday Afternoon

A "Phantom Car" without a driver, operated by radio controls from an airplane flying 1,000 feet above it, will be driven around the race track at Fair Park Sunday afternoon in an American Legion benefit performance.

The stunt will be handled by Miss Gloria Hall, Los Angeles movie flyer, whose plane is especially equipped for sending the radio impulses that guide the automobile in its journey far below on the ground.

Miss Hall will make the demonstration at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The American Legion will levy an admission charge of 25 cents per person at Fair Park gates, and 40 per cent of the gross receipts go to a fund to send the Little Rock band to the national American Legion convention this fall as an advertising feature for the Arkansas department.

When Miss Hall takes up her plane and establishes radio connections with the automobile parked on the race-track, the onlookers are going to see on the ground.

Lily-Like Plant Doubles In Brass; It Beautifies Home and Kills Rats

WASHINGTON—(P)—A plant that's a joy to the housewife's eye is a deadly poison to rats.

It's red squill, described by the U. S. Department of agriculture as a decorative feature of any home when growing it in a flower pot, but sure death to rats and mice when ground into powder and mixed with food.

Best of all, the department's scientists say, red squill seems to chafe a grub only against rats and mice. Unless taken in large quantities, it is practically always harmless to cats, dogs, poultry and children who eat it by mistake, say James Silver and J. C. Munch, biologists who have studied the plant.

Red squill, also known as "sea-lily," belongs to the lily family. It develops a huge bulb, and bears attractive small white flowers.

In preparing this "home-grown" rat poison, the bulb is cut in thin slices after the dry outer husk has been removed. The slices are placed in a drying oven and held at a constant temperature of 176 degrees Fahrenheit until thoroughly dried.

The squill should then be ground to a fine powder and kept in an air-tight container.

Fish, meat, grain or fruits and vegetables, cut into fine pieces, make the best bait, it is advised. One ounce of the red squill powder is mixed with a pound of bait.

Several different kinds of bait should be used, say the experts, for rats, like humans, differ in their tastes.

Farms, Not Wild Animals, May Supply Future Furs

WASHINGTON—(P)—Many wild fur-bearing animals of Europe are facing extinction, and future fur supplies probably will come entirely from animals raised in captivity, it is reported to the department of state by the U. S. Consulate at Milan, Italy.

World consumption of furs is steadily increasing, so that furs raised by animal farmers will find a ready market, the report says.

Karakul sheep, silver and blue foxes, and mink imported from North America are among the fur-bearing animals most successfully raised in captivity.

BOOTLEGGERS OF

unit and includes undercover work and "raids."

The state is divided into five districts by the revenue department and each district office handles all tax collections, reporting to the office of the commissioner, David A. Gates.

As explained by Earl Wiseman, deputy commissioner in charge of the tobacco tax, undercover men go over the state investigating wholesalers and retail dealers. When they learn of several violators in one section, a report is made to the commissioner.
Then what is known as the "flying squadron."

A group of inspectors is summonsed to Little Rock, given instructions and sent to "raid" the "bootlegging" dealers before they are aware they are even suspected.

Mr. Gates explained the work is not to harass the dealers, but merely to collect the revenue due the state. To discourage the "bootlegging" and still collect the revenue, the department has evolved a system of compromise where an arrested dealer may refund the state the amount of tax he owes and sign an affidavit denying any intent to violate the law and declare he will obey the strict letter of the law in the future.

In addition to a fine for possession of unstamped cigarettes and cigars, the offending dealer is subject to a civil suit for recovery by the state. This amounts to $25 for each package of unstamped cigarettes and a similar amount for each box of cigars on which the tax has not been paid.

Revenue from the tax, which is five cents on a package of 20 cigarettes and one cent on each cigar, goes to the schools of the state. Eighty per cent of the fund is applied to the common school and equalizing funds, with 10 per cent to the University of Arkansas building fund and the remaining 70 per cent to other state supported schools.

WICHITA, Kan.—(P)—The Derby
Oil company of Wichita announced Saturday that it would pay 60 cents per barrel for Kansas crude oil of 44 gravity and above.

Derby is the first of the Kansas purchasers to increase the price from a top of 42 cents, following the ultimatum of the Kansas public service commission that unless crude were raised to at least 60 cents, the commission would order a hearing looking to the nature and extent of a general shutdown order. The new schedule ranges downward to 40 cents per oil of 29 gravity and below.

The company has been buying 5500 barrels daily.

Tick Eradication Program Now On

Seven Counties In South Arkansas Maintaining Schedule

A total of 18,258 herds comprising 80,000 cattle were regularly dipped under the supervision of the federal, state, and county officials and in cooperation with stockmen in the conduct of systematic and final cattle tick eradication in south Arkansas during June, according to the monthly status report. Approximately 50,000 horses and mules were also treated, states Dr. J. H. Bux, state veterinarian, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

Systematic dipping was carried on in Lincoln, Cleveland, Dallas, Nevada, Hempstead, LaFayette, and Columbia counties. In this area the number of infested animals was 40. This indicates effectiveness as animals properly and regularly dipped and running on infested ground do not show ticks large enough to be seen by the naked eye.

Fourteen-day dipping kill any that get on between dipping while they are small. Finding a few ticky animals also shows that there are still ticks on the vegetation during June, hatched from ticks dropped early in the year and before dipping began.

Any ticky animals found during the harvest season will indicate that some animals was not dipped and female ticks dropped off, laid eggs, and hatched ticks.

Final tick eradication for June was confined to inspections of cattle, horses, and mules in areas in which infestation might be found and dipped or exposed animals in a few hundred herds in nine counties exposed to infested areas.

Preliminary tick eradication by means of motion pictures where shown at night at 20 school houses to 3,165 people during the month in the inactive infested areas of Drew and Chicot counties for the purpose of preparation of the stock owners for cooperating in a campaign of systematic tick eradication next year.

The Right to Be Safe

Two women are in a local hospital, as this is written—the victims of two automobile accidents.

Two of the women hurt Tuesday night, may die. The other two have been in the hospital for more than a week. A grown boy stops in our office every day to buy the paper. He is waiting for his mother and sister to recover sufficiently to continue on what was to have been a vacation tour from Texas to Illinois.

Surely the men who dreamed and wept and prayed over the design of the first successful automobile never supposed that what they were contributing to the unalloyed happiness of the human race. They gave us the horsepower of the hurricane, the speed of lightning—who could have told them, and made them believe it, that a considerable part of the human race would make this vehicle of pleasure an engine of swift and horrible destruction?

We have just finished a new state road from here to Texarkana. And in a little over a week there have been two head-on collisions. The disturbing feature is that both of them occurred under circumstances which make us believe that only an arithmetical chance prevented you and me from being in the same spot. You take your car out tonight, you put your family in it and drive somewhere, as carefully as you may. Isn't it a predestined chance that sooner or later you yourself may be looking down the headlight beams of another collision? It is, and it will be, so long as the state takes the fatalistic view of motor accidents so prevalent in Arkansas.

Highways are a public place. Motor cars are private property risked in a public place, carrying human beings who have every right to demand the protection of the state of health and safety and happiness.

These repeated collisions on new concrete roads emphasize but one thing: Arkansas must adopt standard state regulations providing for the licensing of every automobile driver, which license may be revoked for cause.

To presume, as we do, that every adult person is fit to guide a motor car over high-speed paved roads, is to perpetuate a ghastly error that helps to swell the nation's toll of highway fatalities. And the tragic names that appear in the newspapers are a grim warning that Fate has picked out only a few at random and will shuffle again for the rest of us.

It should be the aim of the highway patrol and the local authorities to prosecute vigorously every person, high or low, in an automobile accident which involves other persons' lives and property.

It should be the aim of the state constantly to sift out drivers who from one cause or another are proved to be habitually unreliable or dangerous. Other states do it. Arkansas should.

The Highway Program Ends

HAVING spent the money borrowed for a major highway building program extending over four years, Arkansas highway forces are now reduced to a minimum, and the department will proceed with maintenance of the roads which have been built.

Considered as a whole, satisfactory results have been obtained in the move to provide an adequate system of state highways. The state now has a number of concrete highways, considerable "black top" and a great amount of good gravelled roads. True, we are far from a uniform system of high quality highways, but we cannot afford to pay for such a system at present. As present highway obligations are relieved from tax revenues, the state will be able to contract for additional construction.—Harrison Times.

Worth the Money

SOME folks are criticizing the federal farm board. In these sober, distressing times the farm board is the only institution that has been able to get a genuine laugh out of a depressed people.

Even professional humorists are getting only occasional grunts.

But a day hardly passes that the farm board doesn't think up something ludicrous.

Only yesterday they extracted great gobs of mirth from the people by suggesting, in a spirit of jest, no doubt, that the South plow under every third row of cotton to raise the price.

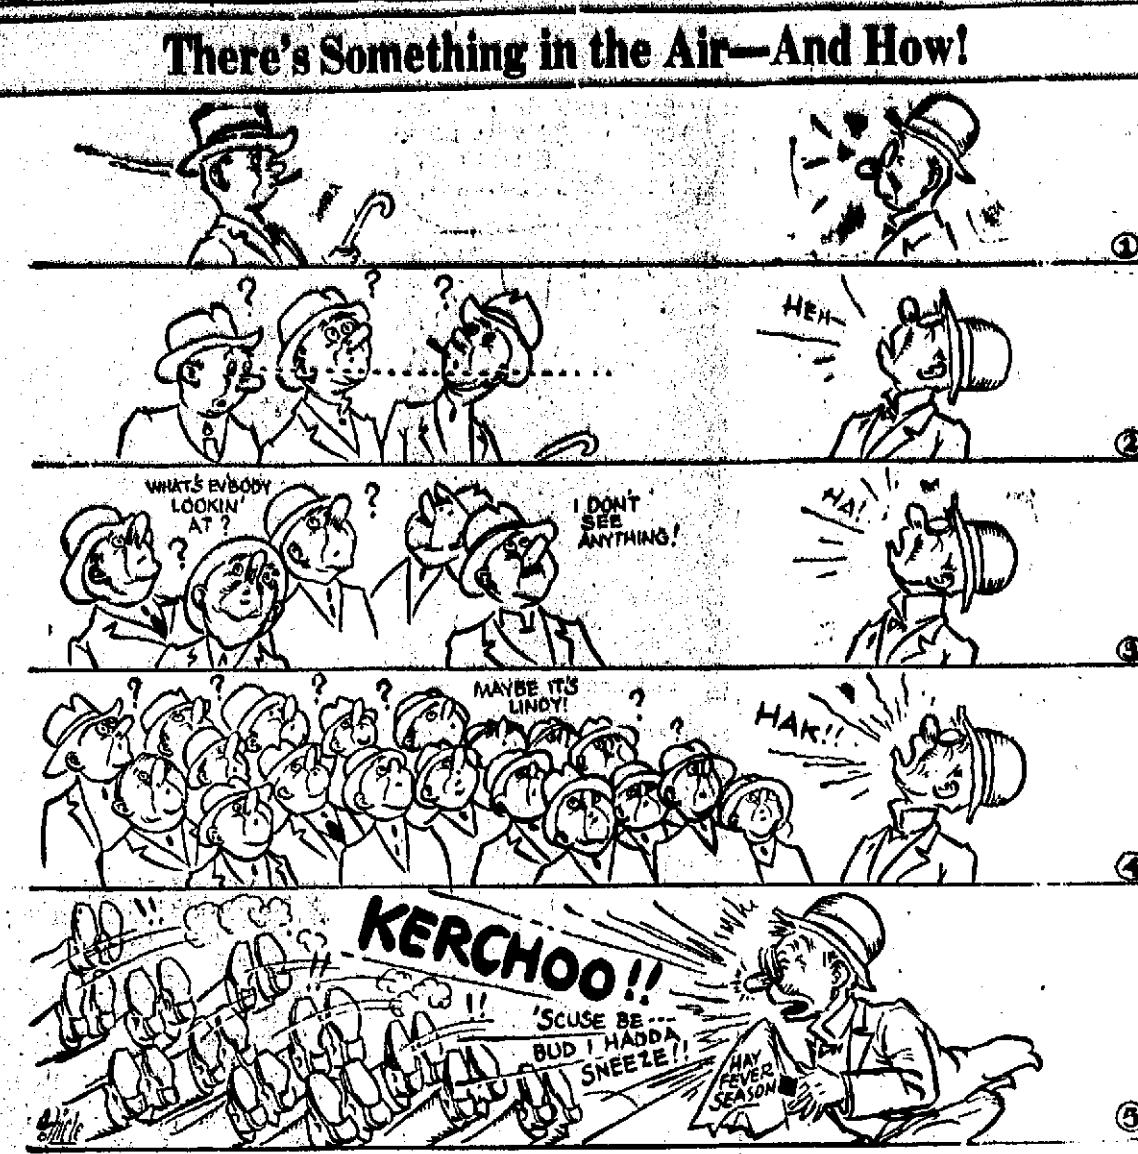

Even the farmers laughed. Whatever the board gets for amusing the people, they are underpaid.

They seem to have an unlimited reserve, and uncanny ability to bring their jokes to a swift, but surprising climax. Can't you see the humor in the suggestion that the farmers destroy their cotton?

The stage was all set. The farmers did as they were told, raised a generous supply of food and feed stuff, made more cotton or less money than ever before in history, worked like galley slaves, sacrificed and pinched, trusting that even if the price was not satisfactory, the volume would help to offset it, and then the farm board suggests that the thing to do is plow the cotton under. Destroy it.

I tell you, it was a great joke.—Walter Sorrells, Jr., in Blue Bluff Columnist.

There's Something in the Air—And How!

BARBS

A dispatch the other day told of a farmer in Dakota who turned his turkeys loose on the grasshoppers and the hoppers ate the feathers off the turkeys. That makes Winslow, Conn., where the nine-legged calves come from, look pretty cheap.

A man who speaks 17 languages was married the other day to a woman who speaks 12 languages. It's a pretty safe bet that the 12 languages will get the better play.

Bandits robbed several American tourists recently in China. That seems to be going pretty far out of the way for that kind of experience.

Henry Ford says money is merely a symbol. And have you ever noticed how symbols a garage mechanic's repair bill can be?

G. B. Shaw regrets that he is 75 years old instead of 18 so that he could go to Russia and grow up with the country. Most young men of 18, however, seem to be fonder of other things than growing up with a country.

It would be a fine thing for everybody if all the farmers could get their neighbors to cut down a little on production.

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of
"MAD MARRIAGE"

Norma Kent, pretty 16-year-old secretary, is employed in a law office in Marlboro, middle-western metropolis. On her way to keep dinner engagement with her friend, Norma picks up a puppy in spite of the fact that she is in the middle of downtown traffic. A stranger rescues the dog and brings it to the girl. The stranger is Mark Travers, a young man with a good record and introduces himself as MARK TRAVERS. Norma refuses to tell him her name or where he comes from again.

She takes the puppy with her and meets Bob, the boy, by calling and asking for the dog and then dines at a favorite restaurant. For the first time, Norma decides to marry him. Norma refuses, saying she wants to keep their association on the basis of friendliness instead of love. When she makes this she has a conversation with CHRISTINE RAUNBERG, generally called "Chris." She finds her roommate has been drying.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

CHRIS turned sharply but not in time to hide the bright tear that glistened on her lash. Norma caught a glimpse of tell-tale red tracings about the other girl's eyes.

"What is it, honey?" Norma begged. "Tell me what's wrong!"

There was no answer. Chris' back was toward Norma. The slim, well-built shoulders gave no evidence what was going on in the girl's mind. After a moment she replied in level tones, "Nothing. There's nothing at all wrong."

Norma knew there was nothing to be gained by further questioning. The older girl disappeared through the doorway and Norma crossed the room. She picked up her hat from the table where she had tossed it, took off her coat and hung both away in the clothes closet.

Suddenly Norma remembered events earlier in the evening. She ran to the chair where she had dropped the stray puppy. The puppy was not there.

Almost instantly she spied him, wobbling with awkward steps toward a pillow that had fallen from the davenport. There was an investigation tilt to the pup's nose, zest for exploration even in the way he bore his stub of a tail. Here was a dog out to see what manner of a place was this into which fortune had hurled him.

With a sweeping movement the girl caught up the little animal, rubbing his head gently with one forefinger.

JUST then Chris entered. She had changed the black frock for an orchid negligee. Chris halted on the threshold.

"Well—! Where in the world did THAT come from?"

Norma looked up, smiling. "Isn't he adorable? Look—he likes to chew buttons!" She drew the cuff of her blouse out of biting distance of those tiny white teeth.

"Adorable? Looks to me like a cross between a breakfast food and a ball of yarn. Honestly, is it a dog? Where, I repeat, did you find such an object?"

Once more Norma told the story of the puppy's rescue. This time she gave full details and due credit to the stranger who had played such an important part in the affair.

"Honestly, I was frightened when he ran right into the midst of those cars. It was a miracle he wasn't hurt. The minute he started I knew I'd done a dreadful,reckless thing. It was the puppy I was thinking of, but just suppose the man had been injured—!"

Chris Saunders leaned her head backward, shot a quizzical glance at her roommate.

Greta Garbo—at 17 and Today

NEA Los Angeles Bureau
Recognize this little bathing girl, version of 1922, on the left? Yes, sir, she's the gorgeous Greta Garbo, at 17, when she was just a Swedish home-town girl and her name was Greta Gustafsson. But then she came to Hollywood, and Gustafsson became Garbo, and Garbo became that mysterious and charming young woman shown in her latest picture at the right.

you know we're fighting.
"He's in love with you, infant. He's in love with you and Bob Farrell's a young man lots of girls would give their eyeteeth to land!"

"Chris Saunders! Are you actually telling me I ought to marry Bob?"

Instantly the other girl objected. "Nothing of the sort! I'll be a far day when you little friend, Chris, starts telling anyone how to run their lives. I can't even chauffeur my own. I'm not telling you to marry Bob. I only say Bob's a grade-A applicant, and—well, isn't it a rotten sort of life to be tied to an office day after day? Six days a week. Fifty weeks a year. Marrying a man like Bob Farrell would be a lot better than that. Sometimes I think I can't stand it another day. Sometimes—!"

Her words broke. There was a pitch of hysteria in the choking tones.

"Why, Chris, darling! Chris, you mustn't talk like this!"

CHRIS had turned away. She brushed one hand across her eyes and it came away moist with tears. There was no attempt now to hide them. Chris coughed.

"Oh, I'll get over it," she said with an attempt at carelessness. "Never mind about me."

"But I do mind. A lot! After all you've done for me do you think I'm going to have you feeling blue and miserable? Listen, let's plan to do something interesting over the week-end. Take a trip somewhere, maybe. We could be extravagant just for once. Where'll we go?"

Chris got to her feet. "We'll talk about it later," she said. Was there any relevancy in the fact that a few minutes later she turned to say over her shoulder, "Brad ordered a new car today. Twin six coupe. It's to have a special body."

It was not unusual for Chris to refer to her employer so familiarly. "Brad" was what everyone at the Hart Advertising Agency called Bradley Hart when they were not addressing him directly. As a matter of fact Hart's golfing companions, acquaintances at his two clubs and the man and women with whom he was seen at theaters and supper resorts called him "Brad."

CHRIS ignored this. She sat down, one foot curled comfortably beneath her. "Then you didn't learn your handsome hero's name?" she asked, returning to the earlier subject of conversation.

"He said it was Travers. Mark Travers. Maybe that was just a stall, though, the same as saying you'd meet me at the Palais Royal. You know," the girl admitted, "I sort of liked him until he said that. How I do hate pick-ups!" Norma pounded the padded arm of the davenport with vengeance!

"They all do it, baby. Haven't you lived long enough to learn that?" Chris' tone was caustic again. "Travers— She repeated the name slowly. "Maybe your boy friend is old F. M. Travers' son. You know—the real estate magnate. Did the lad look like a millionaire's pampered son?"

"What should I know about millionaire's sons? Don't be silly. He was good-looking and what he did was brave but of course I'll never see him again as long as I live. Oh—Bob proposed again tonight."

"Proposed?"

"Marriage. Holy bonds. What am I going to do about it, Chris? I've told him three times that I just want to go on being friends but it doesn't seem to make any impression. Bob's been getting well, different lately! I don't know what to do."

"Why don't you marry him?"

"Because I don't want to! Really, Chris, Bob doesn't seem to be the same boy lately. He's always getting sentimental and that starts an argument. Then the first thing

Love's Fickleness Checked

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—(AP)—Three out of four couples in Sacramento county change their mind about getting married after applying for marriage licenses. Of 889 couples who filed applications in five months under the so-called "gin-marriage" laws, only 222 returned at the end of the three days for the license.

The idea for the picture was Rockne's.

Explosions Of Factory Dust Measured With Test Blasts

WASHINGTON—(P)—Uncle Sam's chemists are blowing windows out of a big wooden box to learn how to safely use explosives against dust explosions.

Like boys who set off Fourth of July firecrackers inside tin cans, they are trying to find out just how much of an explosion it takes to wreck the can.

The "firecrackers" in this experiment are clouds of grain, starch or cork dust, and the "tin can" is a square box of heavy planks with hinged windows and iron doors of various sizes that can be fastened shut or left to swing freely.

Inside the box the chemists can simulate the same conditions that exist when a spark from a lathe ignites wood dust in a woodworking plant or when the dust in a grain elevator takes dust in the air.

the final stretch of the America highway across a big celebration will be held early next month. The southern of the highway will have been built from Little Rock to the state and is now being used in a wide variety of paving links soon finished. The entire highway is completely paved by the time the celebration is held.

"We have made rapid strides in building in the last decade," said Mickey, president of the Broadway association. "But in importance has a more aggressive one been taken than in the Little Rock-Memphis sector. The completion of 12 bridges marks a forward move which will be appreciated by tourist on the Broadway. The Broadway celebration will be one well worth while, for it gives to the Broadway facilities for handling a great many made this year."

Seattle Infield Speedy
in Turning Double Plays

FRANCISCO—(P)—As the second half of the Pacific Coast league season neared the midway mark the Seattle Indians had a total of 136 double plays. One of them were made by the second base shortstop combination of the score-cards reading Muller Ellsworth to Taylor. Some, however, were started by Fritz Knothe, third baseman.

Mrs. Lindbergh, who acts as radio operator, seems to be enjoying the experience, judging from her smile.

Rolling One's Cigarettes
Gaining in Popularity

WASHINGTON—(P)—Rolling one's own cigarettes apparently is returning toward popularity as one result of economic conditions.

Treasury department data Sunday showed that despite losses in revenues from all other tobacco tax divisions, the total from cigarette papers and tubes increased.

Tax experts attributed the increase of $117,041 over last fiscal year, bringing the total to $1,411,826, to the effects of the depression and less buying of manufactured brands.

Card games presumably were more entertaining to families on restricted budgets than were theaters. Revenues from playing card taxes jumped $174,267 to a total of $4,993,559, while receipts from theater admissions fell off nearly 50 per cent.

Theater ticket sales in the last fiscal year totalled only $2,778,864, a decline of $1,451,803.

Eight Church Members
Are Ordered Expelled

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—(P)—Eight members of the Ninth Avenue Baptist church here who signed a petition last week asking that the Rev. W. L. Griggs, pastor, be not re-elected, were expelled from the church Sunday by a vote of the congregation.

The expelled members, as well as Griggs, were all present during the discussion which preceded the expulsion vote.

Numerous complaints were cited in a six page petition signed by the eight, chief among them being that Griggs had sought to secure publicity for himself at the expense of the church.

Hears no Complaint
On Dipping Work

Willow Resident Notes
Improved Appearance of Cattle

"I have not heard a single complaint against the dipping program started in Dallas county this season," states W. P. Voss of Willow.

The improved appearance of the cattle since dipping was started and the reduction of lice and other varieties of ticks has occurred to the extent that many stockmen are dipping hogs as well as cattle, horses and mules.

The prediction that tick eradication will be completed at an early date if the stock owners will continue their present cooperation was made. "We hope to get in some good beef and dairy bulls for improving our cattle as soon as ticks are eradicated," continued Mr. Voss.

Working
close . . .
with a "Caterpillar"

THE MODEL TEN SURE FOOTED AND RESPONSIVE WORKING CLOSE TO THE TREES

One of the great advantages of the "Caterpillar" track-type tractor in orchard cultivation is its ability to work close to the trees . . . and under the laden boughs.

But even more important is its ability to work close in the matter of production costs . . . under the time and labor laden figure that marks the line between profit and loss in fruit production.

Firm, sure traction on cover crops . . . positive steering on hilly land . . . a width of disk or other tools that will enable you to cut out the rows with a single trip around a line of trees . . . the ability to turn in narrow headlands . . . ample power for heavy chisels and deep subsoilers.

Add to this the great amount of power in the control of one man . . . the ease of caring for the "Caterpillar" . . . the low fuel cost and the great economy of fuel due to small friction losses and the almost total elimination of slipping . . . the long life, based on fine materials, balanced design and master craftsmanship.

And you have a picture of "working close with the 'Caterpillar'". Every other great industry in the world has sought and found methods of working close to basic costs. The orchardist who is to make money consistently will be the man who follows their example and adopts the methods that hold production costs to a low level. Write for our illustrated folder . . .
